Xi Tells Biden China Is Ready to Work With Incoming Administration

Story by Annie Linskey, James T. Areddy • 8h • 5 min read

LIMA, Peru—Chinese leader Xi Jinping on Saturday told President Biden that Beijing remains committed to stable relations with the U.S., an expression of hope for continuity in ties before Donald Trump returns to the Oval Office in the midst of promises to squeeze Beijing over trade.

Before their meeting in Lima, Xi expressed his readiness to work with the new administration. "China's goal of a stable, healthy and sustainable China-U.S. relationship remains unchanged," he told Biden, speaking through an interpreter.

China stressed the sentiment in a series of dispatches quoting Xi published by the government's official Xinhua News Agency that reiterated the phrase "has not

(Bloomberg) -- President Xi Jinping announced that China will host the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation summit in 2026, which would bring leaders from the 21-member group — including potentially US President-elect Donald Trump — to the world's second-biggest economy.

Xi made the remarks on Saturday at the APEC summit in Peru, where he is set to meet with US President Joe Biden later in the day.

China is "looking forward to deepen cooperation with APEC nations," Xi said, according to state-run CCTV.

Although US-China relations have stabilized of late, Trump's threats to impose 60% tariffs on goods shipped from the Asian nation threaten to roil ties once again. At the APEC summit in Peru this week, Xi has reached out to US allies and sought to portray himself as a defender of the international trading system.
